Mr. and Mrs. Babel sailed from New York for the old country on May 8, last and expect to return this month, if they can get away. Mr. Babel is a professor in a musical college at Ft. Wayne, Indiana, where the couple make their home.

REMARKABLE BATTLE PHOTOGRAPHS FROM EUROPEAN CONFLICT.

This battle scene is from an actual photograph of French troops snapped outside of Louvain. The men are meeting with a fierce fire a German infantry charge. At the right is a priest hurrying with an army surgeon, to the battle-field after the fighting had ended. The priest's mission was to administer the last rites of the church to the dying; that of the surgeon to serve the living.

BOROUGH COUNCIL WILL HOLD SPECIAL MEETING

Borough council, at the regular meeting last night, disposed of a number of matters of importance, and incidentally continued the discussion of the fire house problem.

The petition of John W. Wrigley, and Dr. S. C. Stewart for the paving of the alley between Front and Second street, from Locust to Pine street, was received. The borough solicitor was directed to draw up a petition signed by the abutting property owners, agreeing to pay the cost of the paving.

Bids for the improvements bonds were opened. Mrs. Emma M. Weld, of Ushville, was awarded one bond of $500 and the balance, $8,100, were awarded to the Clearfield bank, which offered a premium of $183.33 on that amount of the issue.

H. A. Black a member of the board of health from the Third ward, resigned and Charles O'Neill was chosen as his successor.

The discussion relative to the construction of the new hose houses in the Second and Fourth wards was taken up. It was finally decided to hold a special meeting of council, next Monday or Tuesday evening for the purpose of endeavoring to decide upon the erection of the houses.

INSTALLATION OF MEMBERS OF ANCIENT UNITED WORKMEN

Anchor lodge, No. 245, Ancient Order United American Workmen had a most delightful time in Knights of Pythias hall last evening, the occasion being the installation of the last ten members of the fifty in the class organized by Deputy Grand Organizer Frank R. Callahan. A class of ladies was also initiated.

The ceremonies of initiation were pleasing and impressive. Hon. Edward F. Hohman, grand master workman, being present and aiding in the work. A degree team was brought here by Mr. Hohman, and the work of the team was very interesting.

After the installation refreshments were provided and a number of addresses were made. The event was one of the most entertaining ever held by the order in Clearfield, and the lodge here makes a new start in progressiveness which is certain to increase its membership and usefulness in the coming years.

John Kuntz, of Johnstown, was present with his slides and gave a very instructive lecture on the order and the benefits derived by those who become members.

The A. O. U. W. was founded in '68 by John Jordan Upchurch, of Meadville, and is the pioneer of the fraternal beneficiary system on the American continent. In 1899 the order had a membership of 450,000.

GENERAL JOFFRE MAN OF SILENCE

French Commander-in-Chief is Hardly Known to His Troops

TRIES TO KEEP RANK SECRET

Was in the War of 1870 and Won Promotion by His Gallantry on the Field—He Has Been a Great Help to France in the Building of Forts and Roads.

(By International News Service.)
Paris, Sept. 3.—Gen. Joseph Joffre, generalissimo of the French in the new war against Germany, is a man of silence. His whereabouts today are a secret. He is almost unknown to the public and few of his soldiers would recognize him if he motored by them.

Should France eventually win out against her enemies, the Germans, it will not be another victory for Napoleon, which was Joffre's fondest dream.

Round and fat, silent and saturnine Joffre is not unlike the great Corsican in build and characteristics and he is a profound believer in Napoleonic principles, to strike first, to hit the enemy in many places at once and to veil his movements with strict secrecy.

He started this war that way. The French were not successful. The Germans crossed the border. M. Millerand has taken charge and declared that no more Napoleonic policies go. Joffre has been overruled. Today the French army, instead of being all along the border and in Alsace, Lorraine, and elsewhere is concentrated to oppose the main German advance.

Joffre believes in making war in silence. Indeed that has been the marked difference between this campaign and the one of 44 years ago. Then, the names of generals were of every tongue, now no one knows who is the leader in any particular exploit. When a French brigade entered Mulhausen a few days ago, the public was not told who was the brigadier in command, for fear it would prove valuable information for the enemy.

It is related of Joffre that he never betrays his rank even to his own men who do not know him. When the troops were being mobilized at the beginning of this war, the generalissimo was at a railway station, but without any insignia to denote his rank.

THE RUSSIAN ARMY AS IT REALLY IS

Officers Said to be Best Trained in Europe at Start of the War

ARE ALL FIRE-TRIED VETERANS

Experience Gained in the War With Japan Has Been of Incalculable Benefit to the Czar's Commanders—Composed of General Who Have Been Drilled Into Clock-Working Machines.

(By International News Service.)

St. Petersburg, Sept. 3.—Due to experience in the war with Japan, the officers of the Russian army were said to be the best trained in Europe at the beginning of present titanic conflict. The education of the modern officer has radically changed during the last few years. The development of present-day warfare has rendered it necessary for him to acquire an ever increasing burden of knowledge so that on the continent today the military officer is certainly one of the hardest worked members of the community. Every year manoeuvres are made more realistic. But after all, the best training for war is war.

The Russian army today contains the only men in Europe who have had this training, as far as war on a vast scale is concerned. Tens of thousands of officers and men in the field with the Russian army today have had the actual experience in modern warfare on which the textbooks of the other contending armies are based.

Among the endless battalions who are now on the Prussian and Austrian frontiers fighting the Germans and their allies, are any number of officers who have made the inevitable mistake who have made the inevitable mistakes committed by troops facing fire for the first time.

It is probable that every regiment of Russian troops in action today contains seasoned men who faced the inferno of Japanese fire at Port Arthur, Mukden and the other deadly combats of the Manchurian campaign. Military experts understand the inappreciable moral effect which the presence of such veterans has on untried recruits.

Again these fire tried veterans are opposed by Germans with their forty-four years of ceaseless drilling and preparation for war. The conflict of 1914, five weeks old, has not yet decided.

Fearful Onslaught of Germans Cannot be Stayed, by French Troops

LIGHT ARTILLERY IS DOING GREAT DAMAGE

Believed That German Spies in Paris Are Sending Wireless Telephone Messages to German Commanders, Telling of Military Conditions in That City—Refugees From Paris Fill the Roads to Tours and Bordeaux—Hundreds Sleep in Automobiles—Conditions Along the Route in a Quotidian State—French Report That They Have Advanced in Lorraine—English Victory Over German Cavalry at Compiègne.

(By International News Service.)

Paris, Sept. 3.—The Germans are crumpling the left wing of the allies and pushing them back to the Oise river valley. It is reported that the Germans finally fought their way through the Compiègne woods and across the first ridges of new earthworks, less than 40 miles from Paris.

German light artillery are doing heavy damage. German spies in Paris are thought to be utilizing the wireless telephones, informing the enemy of military conditions here.

Photographing Fortifications.
Fresh troops are pouring into Paris. Martial law governs siege conditions. All but two gates are closed.

German aeroplanes fly over the outer fortifications, letting down a box-like apparatus, thought to be a photographic invention.

Germans Near Paris Forts.
London, Sept. 3.—The Germans are near the Paris fortifications, says a dispatch from Gournay, France.

Fleeing From Paris.

Tours, France, Sept. 3.—Paris refugees are swarming here. Tours is unable to take care of half of them, the overflow going to Bordeaux and other points. Innkeepers are charging $10 for cots. Hundreds slept in automobiles on the highway from Paris and Bordeaux. There is a continuous stream of mixed vehicles on the road and chaos exists everywhere.

Capital Moved to Bordeaux

Paris, Sept. 3.—A proclamation was issued after midnight by the government announcing that the government

Turkey's Army Marching on to Invade Greece

(By International News Service.)

Rome, Sept. 3.—A report from Athens, but not confirmed, says a Turkish army is traversing Bulgaria's Aegean sea strip to invade Greece. If this is true the Turks' objective is evidently the newly acquired Greek territory between Kavala and Salonica, if not Salonica itself.

departments will be transferred temporarily to Bordeaux.

Odds Against Germans.

General Gallieni, military governor of Paris, states that the French center is stemming the German onslaughts. "I have no apprehensions," he said, "the Germans right now not advance without risking a cut-off. Odds are against the Germans in the next decisive action. The allies are confident."

French wounded deny the charges of Germans committing atrocities and praise the invaders' valor, saying they are taking care of dying allies.

Germans Try to Crush Left Wing

Worn to exhaustion on their huge battle line by many days of continuous marching and by their appalling losses, the Germans yesterday concentrated all their strength to smother the left arm of the allies.

At other points the firing rife the Germans halted. Only a thin column of German remains at Belfort; the Kaiser's forces appear to have left southern Alsace and the French report a renewal of their victorious progress in Lorraine.

Forced the Allies Back.

The German right has forced the allies back as far as Compiègne, only forty-five miles from Paris. But at Compiègne the Germans met two reverses. In one a force of the Kaiser's cavalrymen were repulsed by the French artillery, while English cavalrymen met a second corps of the Kaiser's horsemen in battle at the west of Compiègne and defeated it.

IMPORTANT DATES.

Stoneville reunion, Sept. 5.
 O. U. A. M. picnic at the Mineral Spring park, Sept. 5.
 Annual W. C. T. U. convention, at DuBois, Sept. 3 and 4.

Thursday, September 3.

Good evening! Be an optimist, even if you have to smile when you are approached by the tax collector.

The leaves are beginning to turn, but not after the manner in which they are turned about the first of the year.

The question of who began this war has been lost sight of in the more important problem of how the war is to be stopped.

Kaiser Wilhelm would feel somewhat puffed if the Russians were to capture Berlin while he is seeking to punish the French.

Eliminate the reckless autoist and the farmers will be more easily persuaded that the highways of the state should be improved.

It would be a nice thing if every household had a wireless station so that they could send out a S. O. S. call for her hubby at night.

Clearfield citizens are no doubt trying to discover how they are going to get a report of the cost of the water works, which will be satisfactory to them.

The state fishery department is going to train young men how to manage fish hatcheries. What is wanted in this part of the state is fish which can be trained to live in polluted waters.

An idea of the difficulties encountered by the war correspondents to get news of the battles may be realized when it is known that even Richard Harding Davis cannot find out what is going on in Europe.

Congressmen are afflicted with nostalgia, a disease which in some places is known as home sickness. Being deprived of pay while they are absent from the halls of congress is enough to make many of the congressmen sick.

PARIS IS PREPARED.

If the Germans reach Paris they will find that city in much better shape to receive an enemy than it was in 1870-71. The fortifications in and around Paris are strong and are filled with the latest model guns and ammunition. It would be no easy task for the Germans to capture Paris, even with the big guns that country has at its command. The French are active at building forts, as those Germans who besieged Liege are well aware by this time. And the forts at Paris are much better prepared to withstand battering than were those at Liege.

It must also be understood that the Germans will probably find themselves between two fires when they reach Paris, if the plans of the French commanders are not changed. It is the purpose of the French to remain outside of Paris so that they may attack and harass the Germans while the latter are pounding away at the Paris fortifications. And, on top of this, it is probable that the vast Russian army will arrive on the scene in time to aid in the work of assaulting the Kaiser's troops. If the Germans are caught between two fires they may find themselves in a very tick-

ly situation and wish themselves nearer Berlin.

ly situation and wish themselves nearer Berlin.

BRUMBAUGH CANNOT ANSWER.

A. Nevin Detrich, state chairman of the Washington party, has asked Dr. Brumbaugh, Republican candidate for governor, to tell the people where he stands on the local option issue. Dr. Brumbaugh, before his nomination, expressed his approval of local option, but after he was placed on the ticket with Senator Penrose the doctor apparently decided that his advocacy of local option might embarrass the candidate of the liquor interests, and he has been as silent as a clam on that issue.

The fact that, after waiting months to let the people know what kind of a platform he and Brumbaugh would stand upon, Penrose refused to permit the Republican state committee to incorporate a local option plank in that platform, without a word or protest by Dr. Brumbaugh, proves quite conclusively that the doctor is willing to do what Penrose tells him to do and that he is even willing to be regarded as one of the candidates of the liquor interests rather than forgo the chances of election.

The people of Pennsylvania have been fooled into electing "well meaning" and "honest" candidates to the gubernatorial chair in years past, but they are not going to be fooled into supporting at the polls a candidate who so plainly shows that he is willing to stifle his conscience and agree to side-step one of the chief issues of the campaign at the behest of the enemies of local option. Dr. Brumbaugh's silence on the local option issue and his subservience to Penrose's dictation border very closely upon the hypocritical if not indicating political dishonesty.

CARRANZA MAKES TROUBLE.

General Carranza, provisional president of Mexico, has ordered the port of Vera Cruz closed. General Funston has asked the president to send him more troops that he may be able to cope with the situation in Mexico, where Carranza appears to be playing the tyrant with as much vigor as characterized the reign of General Huerta. Carranza is demanding double duties on importations, both native and American merchants being his victims.

There is little doubt that Carranza is just as vicious and villainous a man as Huerta was, and if the United States escapes a conflict with him it will be lucky. The truth of the matter is that Mexico has not developed a man who is capable and honest enough to be at the head of its government, and it may be necessary for the United States to go to the unpleasant extreme of assuming a protectorate over that country that peace may come to the Mexican people.

In Europe.

From peasant home to palace hall is felt the torturing dread Of news—the news that one beloved is captured, maimed or dead. With roar of cannon, din and hiss, Of bomb and shot and shell, God hears the shriek, the cry, the moan Of waiting ones; He hears as well The dumb endurance of a hurt Too deep for cry to tell.

'Twas He who won at Waterloo; He sent the rain that day To check Napoleon's arrogance And crush Ambition's sway. God's up there yet. He sees the course Of troops and ships. He rules The currents of the sea and air; His tactics beat the schools. Impotent Man! Puissant God! Strengthless, appalled we stand And while we thank Him for the peace Prevailing in our land Plead: "Check this war contagion, Lord."

Baptize the world with peace, we pray! Send peace in Thine own way! —Evaline Wright Nelson, East Liverpool, O.

The new city directory shows that Clearfield has a population of 37,000. The steel armor plant was shut down two days this week to make repairs to the hearths.

The ceremonies connected with the celebration of the annexation of Curwensville on September 10 will be quite impressive.

ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT

G. A. R. AT DETROIT

The annual encampment of the G. A. R. held at Detroit, has attracted to that city a large number of veterans. The city authorities and the people of Detroit have been courteous to the veterans, showing them the time of their lives. Among other evidences of the hospitality of the Detroiters the following notice issued by the Typotheta-Franklin association of Detroit will show how the people of that city appreciated the coming of the old soldiers:

To the member addressed:
 It was the sense of Monday's meeting that all members close their places of business Wednesday, September 2, all day, it being in honor of the big G. A. R. day.

"THE BANK OF SERVICE"

THE CASE OF JENNIE BRICE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"What was the last you saw of her?"
"She was going across the Sixth street bridge."
"Alone."
"No. She went with a young man we knew."
"There was a stir in the courtroom at this."
"Who was the young man?"
"Mr. Howell, a reporter on a newspaper here."
"Have you seen Mr. Howell since your arrest?"
"No, sir. He has been out of the city."

I was so excited by this time that I could hardly hear. I missed some of the cross examination. The district attorney pulled Mr. Ladley's testimony to pieces.

"You cut the boat's painter with your pocketknife?"

"I did."
"Then how do you account for Mrs. Pittman's broken knife, with the blade in your room?"

"I have no theory about it. She may have broken it herself. She had used it the day before to hit back one of a carpet."

"That was true, I had."
"That early Monday morning was cold, was it not?"

"Yes, yes."
"Why did your wife leave without her fur coat?"

"I did not know she had until we had left the house. Then I did not ask her. She would not speak to me."

"I see. But is it not true that, upon a wet fur coat, being shown you as your wife's, you said it could not be hers, as she had taken hers with her?"

"I do not recall such a statement."

"You recall a coat being shown you?"

"Yes. Mrs. Pittman brought a coat to my door, but I was working on a play I am writing, and I do not remember what I said. The coat was ruined. I did not want it. I probably said the first thing I thought of to get rid of the woman."

"I got up at that. I held my peace about the breadknife, but this was too much. However, the moment I started to speak somebody pushed me back into my chair and told me to be quiet."

"Now, you say you were in such a hurry to get this medicine for your wife that you cut the rope, thus cutting your wrist?"

"Yes. I have the scar still."

"You could not wait to untie the boat, and yet you went along the river front to see how high the water was?"

"Her alarm had excited me. But when I got out and remembered that the doctors had told us she would never die in an attack, I grew more composed."

"You got the medicine first, you say?"

"Yes."
"Mr. Alexander has testified that you got the medicine at 3:30. It has been shown that you left the house at 2 and got back about 4. Does not this show that with all your alarm you went to the river front first?"

"I was gone from 2 to 4," he replied calmly. "Mr. Alexander must be wrong about the time I awakened him. I got the medicine first."

"When your wife left you at the bridge, did she say where she was going?"

"No."
"You claim that this woman at Horner was your wife?"

"I think it likely."

"Was there an onyx clock in the second story room when you moved into it?"

"I do not recall the clock."

"Your wife did not take an onyx clock away with her?"

"Mr. Ladley smiled. "No."

The defense called Mr. Howell next. He looked rested and the happier for having seen Jennie, but he was still pale and showed the strain of some hidden anxiety. What that anxiety was the next two days were to tell us all.

"Mr. Howell," Mr. Lencelyn asked, "you know the prisoner?"

"Slightly."

"State when you met him."

"On Sunday morning, March 4. I went to see him."

"Will you tell us the nature of that visit?"

"My paper had heard he was writing a play for himself. I was to get an interview, with photographs, if possible."

"You saw his wife at that time?"

"Yes."
"When did you see her again?"

"The following morning at 6 o'clock or a little later. I walked across the Sixth street bridge with her and put her on a train for Horner, Pa."

"You are positive it was Jennie Brice?"

"Yes. I watched her get out of the boat while her husband steadied it."

"If you knew this, why did you not come to court sooner?"

"I have been out of the city."

"But you knew the prisoner had been arrested and that this testimony of yours would be invaluable to him."

"Yes. But I thought it necessary to produce Jennie Brice herself. My unreported word."

"You have been searching for Jennie Brice?"

"Yes. Since March 8."

"How was she dressed when you saw her last?"

"She wore a red and black hat and black coat. She carried a small gray valise."

"Thank you."
The cross examination did not shake his testimony. But it brought out some curious things. Mr. Howell refused to say how he happened to be at the end of the Sixth street bridge at that hour or why he had thought it necessary on meeting a woman he claimed to have known only twenty-four hours to go with her to the railway station and put her on a train.
The jury was visibly impressed and much shaken, for Mr. Howell carried

The Doctor Made a Careful Drawing

conviction in every word he said. He looked the district attorney in the eye and once when our glances crossed he even smiled at me faintly. But I saw why he had tried to find Jennie Brice and had dreaded testifying. Not a woman in that courtroom and hardly a man but believed when he left the stand that he was or had been Jennie Brice's lover and as such was assisting her to leave her husband.

"Then you believe," the district attorney said at the end—"you believe, Mr. Howell, that Jennie Brice is living?"

"Jennie Brice was living on Monday morning, March 8," he said firmly.

"Miss Shaeffer has testified that on Wednesday this woman who you claim was Jennie Brice sent a letter to you from Horner. Is that the case?"

"Yes."

"The letter was signed 'Jennie Brice'?"

"It was signed 'J. B.'"

"Will you show the court that letter?"

"I destroyed it."

"It was a personal letter?"

"It merely said she had arrived safely and not to let any one know where she was."

"And yet you destroyed it?"

"A postscript said to do so."

"Why?"

"I do not know. An extra precaution probably."

"You were under the impression that she was going to stay there?"

"She was to have remained for a week."

"And you have been searching for this woman for two months?"

"He quailed, but his voice was steady. "Yes," he admitted.

"You are telling the truth, even if it was not all the truth. I believe had it gone to the jury then Mr. Ladley would have been acquitted. But late that afternoon things took a new turn. Counsel for the prosecution stated to the court that he had a new and important witness and got permission to introduce this further evidence. The witness was a Dr. Littlefield and proved to be my one night tenant of the second story front. Holcombe's prisoner of the night before took the stand. The doctor was less impressive in full daylight—he was a trifle shiny, a bit bulbous as to nose and indifferent as to finger nails. But his testimony was given with due professional weight."

"You are a doctor of medicine, Dr. Littlefield?" asked the district attorney.

"Yes."

"In active practice?"

"I have a cure for inebriates in Des Moines, Ia. I was formerly in general practice in New York city."

"You knew Jennie Ladley?"

"I had seen her at different theaters, and she consulted me professionally at one time in New York."

"You operated on her, I believe?"

"Yes. She came to me to have a name removed. It had been tattooed over her heart."

"You removed it?"

"Not at once. I tried fading the marks with goat's milk, but she was impatient. On the third visit to my office she demanded that the name be cut out."

"You did it?"

"Yes. She refused a general anaesthetic and I used cocaine. The name was John—I believe a former husband. She intended to marry again."

A titter ran over the courtroom. People strained to the utmost are all ways glad of an excuse to smile. The laughter of a wrought on crowd always seems to me half hysterical.

"Have you seen photographs of the scar on the body found at Sewickley? Or the body itself?"

"No. I have not."

"Will you describe the operation?"

"I made a transverse incision for the body of the name and two vertical ones—one longer for the 'J' the other shorter for the stem of the 'L'."

"There was a dot after the name. I made a half inch incision for it."

"Will you sketch the scar as you recall it?"

The doctor made a careful drawing on a pad that was passed to him. The drawing was much like this:

Line for line, dot for dot, it was the scar on the body found at Sewickley.

"You are sure the woman was Jennie Brice?"

"She sent me tickets for the theater shortly after, and I had an announcement of her marriage to the prisoner some weeks later."

"Were there any witnesses to the operation?"

"My assistant. I can produce him at any time."

"That was not all of the trial, but it was the decisive moment. Shortly after the jury withdrew, and for twenty-four hours not a word was heard from them."

JONES WILL MAKE RAIDS ON ORGANIZED BASEBALL

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

(By International News Service)

New York, Sept. 3.—Felder Jones, has been signed up supposedly to devote his services exclusively to the management of the St. Louis Federal.

But the real job that confronts the old White Sox leader is said to be that of attempting to win the minor leagues from the embrace of organized baseball and getting them to join hands with the Feds.

Jones, proceeding about his mission probably will carry an olive branch in one hand and a bludgeon in the other. The minors who think it a wiser plan to spin the olive branch and to stick to Johnson, Herrman, et al, will then be made to feel the sting of the club.

Jones probably will point out to the minor leagues that if they come over to the Feds they will, of course, no longer be subject to Federal raids. The Feds will agree to buy young minor league stars at prices equal to that which they could get for them if they sold them to the American or National league.

"If you don't come with us we'll raid you," will be the gist of the Jones ultimatum. "If we raid we'll take your best players and you won't get a dollar for them because we'll deal direct with the players."

"Come with us and we'll guarantee you our fullest protection. And we'll keep our word, which is something more than the big powers in baseball have done. The National Agreement, of which every big and little organized league in the country is a part, provides that in times of trouble the big fellows must stand by you. Have they done this? Have they helped you? The Federals have raided you, taken your best players and caused you to suffer big losses, without the big fellows raising a hand in your defense."

Jones is to get a salary of $10,000 a year for three years and, in addition, a $50,000 block of the St. Louis Federal stock. Should he succeed in causing some of the minor leagues to jump to the Feds he will have more than earned his salary. The minor leagues act as the foundation that supports the American and National leagues. Without them the two big leagues could not exist.

The minors develop the young players and the big leagues grab them off when they are ripe and place them in their own ranks to take the place of their fading stars. If the American and National leagues could not get players from the minors, their leagues would die of decay, unless they undertook to develop the players themselves—a costly process.

Of course, if some of the minor leagues went over to the Feds, the American and National leagues could do just what the Feds have been doing—raid the leagues. But such a plan would be most disastrous to them. They get most of the minor leagues' new via the draft route, paying $1500 for them and if they deal with the player direct they would have to pay him a sum in excess of the $1500 to outbid the Feds.

Much depends upon Jones' initial efforts along the lines of converting the minor leagues to the Federal faith. Should he succeed in getting one or two of the fairly big minors to jump it seems certain that Johnson and his crowd will be glad to make immediate peace overtures. They would then realize that the jumping of one league foreshadows the jumping of others, and the loss of the small leagues would cripple them beyond a cure.

ONE CENT A MILE INCREASE PROBABLE ON RAILROADS

Passenger rates on railroads will increase within the next thirty or sixty days. but he ease with which he has manipulated two million French troops since the war began shows that he is a practical man, as well.

"Joffre the tactician," as he is known to the general staff, is scarcely known to Parisians. In times of peace he is retiring to a degree and shuns public recognition.

He entered the army in the war of 1870 when only 18 years old, and was promoted for gallantry on the field by Marshal MacMahon. Immediately after the war he was entrusted with rebuilding the forts around Paris, the forts that today are being prepared again to defend the capital against the Germans.

Made a captain at twenty-two, Joffre was sent into the east of France to build up the chain of fortresses there that have proved of such value in resisting the invaders from the north.

Afterward he spent many years raising impenetrable fortifications at Tonkin, Island of Formosa, and Madagascari. His next brilliant achievement was the crushing of the uprising in Dahomey. There with a small force, he utterly crushed the natives and after a short campaign marched into Timbuctoo. Since that time Joffre has been at the head of the French war college, where officers are trained. In addition he has been supreme organizer of the French army and when war loomed on the horizon, there was no debate about placing Joffre in the field as generalissimo. Nobody else was thought of. He is the Lord Kitchen of France.

his station. There were a group of reservists on the platform. All were talking volubly of going to war.

"When do you join?" one youth asked Joffre.

"I have already joined," was the quiet answer.

"Where do you come from?" was asked.

"Paris," was the laconic answer.

"What's your name?" persisted the rural reservist.

"It is best for soldiers to have no names," the generalissimo said with one of his rare smiles, and when an officer who recognized him would have reproved the reservist, Joffre forbade him.

To strike rather than to be struck is one of his axioms. He believes in a forward policy, a policy of attack.

The Russian officer, in social standing and in his relations with his men is a sort of mean between the German and French officer. Like the German he is of official caste and perhaps may come from the nobility, but often, like most of the French officers, he comes from humble origin, and therefore is on friendly and intimate terms with the men under him. The Russian officer enters the military academy very young, seven years or there about, and remains in training ten or eleven years before he is given a commission.

The difficulties confronting the Russian general staff in the present war are many and great. While the British army knows something of the guarding of frontiers by its experience in India, and the Germans and French have had their Alsace-Lorraine frontiers to look after, huge

Russian has seven frontier to be protected. The great empire is vulnerable from seven angles, by land and sea, and while sending her hordes of invaders into Austria and Prussia, must always keep a big force at home to look after her thousands of miles of borders.

It is an axiom of war to be prepared to out-number an enemy at a given point, but Russia has to be ready to out-number her enemy at many points, hundreds and sometimes thousands of miles from each other. Another grave obstacle in the way of the Russian general staff now are the traditions of bribery and corruption which still remain in certain circles of the Russian bureaucracy.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Red Widow."

One of the brightest musical comedy successes of the past and present season, "The Red Widow," direct from its engagement at the Aslor theatre, New York, will be the attraction at the New opera house tonight.

"The Red Widow," while clad in her lurid raiment will offer opportunities to the feminine portion of the theatregoers for viewing some of the most exquisite creations of the dressmakers' art. Gown building that has been brought up to this very day by the purveyors of fashion will supply this attraction with each new model as soon as evolved. Of course the ladies all love to see beautiful apparel and some may desire to copy the up-to-the-minute styles, and a word to the management will permit the inspection of the coveted attire. In addition to pleasing the ladies usually they and their escorts will be charmed by the delectable song numbers, have their risibilities tickled by the comedy situations and no doubt will relish the keen thrusts of satire and the exquisite flashes of wit with which the book is said to abound. A company of nearly three score players will interpret both the beauties of the lyrics and dance numbers.

Al Wilson Coming.

Edward Everett completed arrangements today for the appearance of Al H. Wilson, the German dialect comedian, at the opera house on Friday, Sept. 11. Mr. Everett is an ex-printer who knows the value of newspaper advertising. "I find newspapers the best medium for theatrical publicity," said Mr. Everett during a conversation today. "I have tried various ways of advertising to bring the merits of different theatrical attractions with which I have been connected before the public, but in the end I always went back to the newspapers. I find that by paying careful attention to the construction of the advertisement and by making it attractive, that people will read it. A great deal depends on the advertisement. I believe that by advertising in newspapers a man receives five times as much for the money expended as in any other way. In these days, no business can be made a success unless it is given the right sort of publicity—specially, aggressively, truthfully and persistently. For the theatrical manager or merchant who foolishly claims that he doesn't need to advertise, there is but one ending. The former soon closes his season, and it is not long before the latter has dust on his counters and cob-webs on his shelves."

that a Japanese or a German fleet will knock holes in the buildings in New York or Astoria Park. Why expect an American husband to be while he is suffering from pain and come excited over a distant war mental disquietude because of an onslaught on the dirt germ by his wife and while he must eat his meals from the mantel top or doughty tray because the household furniture has been apparently inextricably mixed because of the housecleaning crusade?

War is a terrible thing, but there are some other things which cause almost equal perturbation to the American citizen, not omitting the family picnic with its attendant miseries; the low standing of his favorite baseball team; the seemingly continuous visits from candidates and lightning rod agents; thoughts of the winter coal bill and the cleaning of snow from the sidewalk; the high cost of living; and the probable rise in the price of automobiles. We have troubles, we men of America, and are therefore somewhat indifferent to the troubles of people across the seas.

A SECOND TERM.
Political platforms are promulgated by either the Republican or Democratic party, are built up of meaningless words and phrases. The Baltimore platform declared very emphatically against a second term for a president of the United States, and Woodrow Wilson endorsed that plank. The Democrats who met at Baltimore and nominated a presidential candidate had believed that Wilson, at the end of his term, would ask for a second term. It is very doubtful if he would have headed the national ticket in 1912.

President Wilson has not made an undoubted success of his efforts to prove himself either a capable or a safe president. He has shown an entirely too great regard for the reputation of the British government to win the support of patriotic citizens. His surrender to Great Britain in the Panama canal toll matter is sufficient of itself to turn against him every voter who believes that America should be ruled by Americans, and that after expending almost one hundred and fifty millions of dollars in digging the canal, the big ditch ought to be under the control of the nation which built it.

Wilson is also too much under the influence of the south to suit many of the members of his own party. It may be said that the south is in the saddle under the Wilson administration for the south has had many favors from the president. The Democratic party has not made good its promise to lower the cost of living through a reduction of the tariff duties, but has increased the burdens of the people by opening the ports of the country to the importation of foreign-made goods. If Wilson becomes the party's candidate in 1916 he will find conditions different from what they were when he was elected in 1912.

TWENTY YEARS HENCE.

Mayor Lansing Snyder, Jr., has returned by airship from a visit to Yellowstone park.

United States Senator Hagerty has introduced a bill in the senate providing for the widening and deepening of the West Branch river to a depth which would permit vessels drawing thirty feet of water to pass upward as far as Chest creek.

The new fifteen-story building of the Clearfield Progress will be occupied by that paper next week.

A resolution was introduced in council last night providing for the municipal ownership of the water works.

A wireless from Washington states that congress is still debating the bill for the regulation of trusts.

Two suffragists were arrested yesterday for illegal voting at the May primaries.

Repairs are being made to the incinerating plant at the mouth of Clearfield creek.

A slight fire occurred at the central market house last night, the auto-chemical quenching the flame before much damage was done.

Fifty-two trains arrived and departed from the union station yesterday.

On Friendship.
I would be true, for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare;
I would be friends of all—the foe—the friendless;
I would be giving, and forget the gift;
I would be humble, for I know my weakness;
I would look up—and laugh and love and lift.

With all truths frankness I would be so tender;
Since highest hopes are the end of scorn
That heeds I seek to help me sense the fragrance
Before they feel the thorn.

With all love's tenderness I would be so loyal;
Since purest passion is the end of fear
That friends I may never find
Dips that love them.

Hard truths they have to hear
H. A. Walker.

It is now believed that the explosion several months ago of the new Zeppelin at Johannisthal, near Berlin, when the entire crew were killed, was caused by the gun on the firing blank cartridges as an experiment.

It is therefore comparatively a simple matter, in the absence of a gun, for an aviator to approach quite close to a Zeppelin from above, for the crew in the cars below the gas bag, cannot hit the aeroplane, so long as the pilot keeps the envelope between himself and the cars of the Zeppelin.

While Germany has been the especial sponsor of the dirigible for military purposes, that country has not overlooked the aeroplane. While France has popularly been supposed to lead in war aeroplanes, Germany has as many as thirteen hundred of these machines, and perhaps the largest trained corps of military aviators in the world.

These thirteen hundred machines are all comparatively new and with all the latest improvements. With one motor firm putting out 140 engines a month for the last six months, one may safely put the entire German output at 250 a month.

With an aeroplane for each of these engines, German military aviation activity breaks all records.

The number of pilots to fly these machines is greater than the aviation corps of any other nation because of Germany's policy of encouraging civilian flying schools. Under this system, each aeroplane firm of any importance had a certain number of soldiers, mostly officers, but some privates and non-commissioned officers allotted to its school to be trained by the firm's own pilots.

The training of these military flyers was paid at a rate that enabled the companies to use the best machines and pay high wages to their pilots. The firms could afford to provide comfortable quarters for their pupils and in other ways to do things on a scale which does not exist in any other country.

In order to stimulate progress in aviation, military aviators were encouraged to enter the big flying competitions and various government departments gave handsome prizes. For this reason, there were thirty starters in the Prince-Henry competition this year, while the big London-Manchester air race in England about the same time brought out only six starters.

It is now practically certain that the German and Austrian air scouts together outnumber all the French, Russian, British, Belgian, Serbian and Dutch aviators, so that in the aerial end of the war, Germany is far ahead of her enemies.

GERMANY'S VAST AEROPLANE FLEET

Zeppelins Are Dangerous Machines in Hands of an Enemy

KAISER HAS MANY AIR SHIPS

Thirteen Hundred Aeroplanes in Connection With the Zeppelin, Dirigibles Give France Something to Worry Over—Germany Has More of These Than All of her Opponents Combined.

(By International News Service)

The story of the ramming of a German Zeppelin airship by the famous French aviator Roland Garros, a story which yet lacks for confirmation and is disbelieved by those who know Garros best, probably arose from the idea that a Zeppelin cannot be attacked in any other way, owing to its being defended from assault from above, by a rapid-firing gun mounted atop the gas bag.

In order to make sure of his aim at a bomb thrower in an aeroplane would have to approach within 100 feet above the Zeppelin where he would be within easy range of the gun supposed to be mounted on the balloon.

As a matter of fact however, only three or four of the very latest Zeppelins are equipped with these gun platforms and furthermore, it is learned on good authority that none of them is mounted with guns, for it is now known that if there were a leak in any of the chambers of the gas bag near the middle portion of the dirigible, the escaping hydrogen would find its way out near the gun platform and would be most certain to explode when the gun was discharged.

It is now believed that the explosion several months ago of the new Zeppelin at Johannisthal, near Berlin, when the entire crew were killed, was caused by the gun on the firing blank cartridges as an experiment.

It is therefore comparatively a simple matter, in the absence of a gun, for an aviator to approach quite close to a Zeppelin from above, for the crew in the cars below the gas bag, cannot hit the aeroplane, so long as the pilot keeps the envelope between himself and the cars of the Zeppelin.

While Germany has been the especial sponsor of the dirigible for military purposes, that country has not overlooked the aeroplane. While France has popularly been supposed to lead in war aeroplanes, Germany has as many as thirteen hundred of these machines, and perhaps the largest trained corps of military aviators in the world.

These thirteen hundred machines are all comparatively new and with all the latest improvements. With one motor firm putting out 140 engines a month for the last six months, one may safely put the entire German output at 250 a month.

With an aeroplane for each of these engines, German military aviation activity breaks all records.

The number of pilots to fly these machines is greater than the aviation corps of any other nation because of Germany's policy of encouraging civilian flying schools. Under this system, each aeroplane firm of any importance had a certain number of soldiers, mostly officers, but some privates and non-commissioned officers allotted to its school to be trained by the firm's own pilots.

Fresh Fighting in Belgium.

A significant dispatch is that received by the Central News from Amsterdam, saying that fresh fighting is taking place near Malines, Belgium.

Coupled with this is the announcement from Harwich that the boat service between that British port and Antwerp was resumed tonight, after having been discontinued for a fortnight.

It is reported here that another large expeditionary force, probably 100,000 men, was sent from Harwich to Antwerp. It is possible that this force formed a junction with the Belgians and that the two aim to sever the German army's communications and threaten the right flank of the Kaiser's forces in France.

Concerning the fall of Amiens, the Mail's correspondent writes:

"It was a black Sunday evening when a party of Germans entered Amiens by the Rue Jules Ferry. After a brief reconnaissance they retired to the German main body at Canon. A half hour later, they returned, accompanied by an officer bearing a white flag. The officer interviewed Mayor Fournier at the town hall. After a brief discussion the mayor appeared in front of the town hall with a flag and, officially, announced the surrender of the city. He urged that the citizens make no disturbance. The mayor and the municipal authorities were ordered to pay a royal visit to the German commander who told them that they would be held personally responsible for their lives for the good conduct of the citizens."

Entrenchments Outside of Paris. Paris, Sept. 3.—An immense and well-planned system of entrenchments is being constructed outside the city. It is reported that the engineers in charge of the work are keeping several hundred thousand men busy. The capital is now in a state of siege. Martial law is in vogue.

It is officially announced that General Gallieni, commander of the army defending the north, yesterday issued the following proclamation to the inhabitants of Paris:

"The members of the government of the republic have left Paris in order to give a new impetus to the defense of the nation. I have been ordered to defend Paris against the invaders. This order I will fulfill to the end."

GALLIENI. Military Governor of Paris, commanding the army of Paris.

CONSTABLE CAPTURES DESPERATE DESPERADOS

Early this forenoon, six fierce, desperate men entered the yard of William Robbins, who lives at the Moose creek bridge and demanded that coffee be made for their morning meal. Whereupon Mr. Robbins became very uneasy and called for officers of the law. The officers responded and after capturing the desperados, brought them to Magistrate Barclay's office, who commended the officers for their efficient work and discharged them. Upon investigation, the six proved to be young fellows from Philadelphia, who were on their way to Cleveland, via the A No. 1 route, box cars, gondolas, etc.

BRIEF SKETCH OF CHIESA, THE NEWLY ELECTED POPE

Washington, Sept. 3.—Cardinal Del Val Chiesa, the new pope, was born at Pedil, near Genoa, in Italy in 1854. He was ordained to the priesthood in '78 and went to Madrid as secretary of the Nuncio in 1883, remaining there until 1887. He returned to Rome and acted as a minor official in the office of the papal secretary of state. In 1901 the late Cardinal Rampollo, then the secretary of state, recognized his ability and promoted him to the position of virtually first assistant secretary of state. Pope Pius X, in 1907, appointed him Archbishop of Bologna, Italy. There he remained as archbishop until he was created cardinal at the last consistory held early this year.

Cardinal Della Chiesa is regarded here as being a man very similar to Cardinal Rampollo. It was to Cardinal Rampollo that he owed the promotion to the office of vice secretary of state which brought him to the attention of Pope Pius and probably enabled him to get the red hat only seven years after he had been made archbishop.

TWO BAKERS IN TROUBLE OVER SOME FLOUR SACKS

Two cases came up this week arising out of the trouble caused by some flour sacks, two bakers each claiming ownership. The first case was brought before Squire Barclay early in the week, commonwealth vs. Francis C. dilli, Frank Spingola charging Caddil with assault and battery.

Yesterday the case of the commonwealth vs. Frank Spingola was heard by Squire Barclay, the charge being assault and battery. In both cases bail was given and the defendants held for court.

AMUSEMENTS

The opera house was packed last evening from pit to dome to witness the first play of the season, "The Red Widow," and the audience was not disappointed for the play was an incentive to laughter from beginning to end. Cicero Hannibal Butts, a retired millionaire corset manufacturer of Yonkers, N. Y., U. S. A., is also a colonel in the National Guards with to let him tell it, an international reputation as an army tactician. In London, when he arrives on a tour around the world, he meets Anna Varvara, "The Red Widow." Anna is fascinating and flirt, also she is the star of a band of bloodthirsty nihilists who are seeking the life of the czar, a fact which Cicero does not discover until he has had some exciting experiences.

Time and time again the audience applauded the splendid acting of the Red Widow, the rollickery Hannibal Butts, the gay dancing of Yvette and Oswald, the martial acting of Basil Romanoff, of the Imperial Guard, and the leader of the nihilists with his inevitable bomb.

The play was full of interesting plots, spirited and entertaining and spiced with wit. The scenery was beautiful and oriental in its setting. The choruses were delightful in dancing and singing.

GENERAL JOFFRE MAN OF SILENCE

French Commander-in-Chief is Hardly Known to His Troops

TRIES TO KEEP RANK SECRET

Was in the War of 1870 and Won Promotion by His Gallantry on the Field—He Has Been a Great Help to France in the Building of Forts and Roads.

(By International News Service.)
Paris, Sept. 3.—Gen. Joseph Joffre, generalissimo of the French in the new war against Germany, is a man of silence. His whereabouts today are a secret. He is almost unknown to the public and few of his soldiers would recognize him if he motored by them.

Should France eventually win out against her enemies, the Germans, it will not be another victory for Napoleon, which was Joffre's fondest dream.

Round and fat, silent and saturnine Joffre is not unlike the great Corsican in build and characteristics and he is a profound believer in Napoleonic principles, to strike first, to hit the enemy in many places at once and to veil his movements with strict secrecy.

He started this war that way. The French were not successful. The Germans crossed the border. M. Millerand has taken charge and declared that no more Napoleonic policies go. Joffre has been overruled. Today the French army, instead of being all along the border and in Alsace, Lorraine, and elsewhere is concentrated to oppose the main German advance.

Joffre believes in making war in silence. Indeed that has been the marked difference between this campaign and the one of 44 years ago. Then, the names of generals were of every tongue, now no one knows who is the leader in any particular exploit. When a French brigade entered Mulhausen a few days ago, the public was not told who was the brigadier in command, for fear it would prove valuable information for the enemy.

It is related of Joffre that he never betrays his rank even to his own men who do not know him. When the troops were being mobilized at the beginning of this war, the generalissimo was at a railway station, but without any insignia to denote

Officers Said to be Best Trained in Europe at Start of the War

ARE ALL FIRE-TRIED VETERANS

Experience Gained in the War With Japan Has Been of Incalculable Benefit to the Czar's Commanders—Composed of General Who Have Been Drilled Into Clock-Working Machines.

(By International News Service.)
St. Petersburg, Sept. 3.—Due to experience in the war with Japan, the officers of the Russian army were said to be the best trained in Europe at the beginning of present titanic conflict. The education of the modern officer has radically changed during the last few years. The development of present-day warfare has rendered it necessary for him to acquire an ever increasing burden of knowledge so that on the continent today the military officer is certainly one of the hardest worked members of the community. Every year manoeuvres are made more realistic. But after all, the best training for war is war.

The Russian army today contains the only men in Europe who have had this training, as far as war on a vast scale is concerned. Tens of thousands of officers and men in the field with the Russian army today have had the actual experience in modern warfare on which the textbooks of the other contending armies are based.

Among the endless battalions who are now on the Prussian and Austrian frontiers fighting the Germans and their allies, are any number of officers who have made the inevitable mistake who have made the inevitable mistakes committed by troops facing fire for the first time.

It is probable that every regiment of Russian troops in action today contains seasoned men who faced the inferno of Japanese fire at Port Arthur, Mukden and the other deadly combats of the Manchurian campaign. Military experts understand the inappreciable moral effect which the presence of such veterans has on untried recruits.

Again these fire tried veterans are opposed by Germans with their forty-four years of ceaseless drilling and preparation for war. The conflict of 1914, five weeks old, has not yet de-

Fearful Onslaught of Germans Cannot be Stayed, by French Troops

LIGHT ARTILLERY IS DOING GREAT DAMAGE

Believed That German Spies in Paris Are Sending Wireless Telephone Messages to German Commanders, Telling of Military Conditions in That City—Refugees From Paris Fill the Roads to Tours and Bordeaux—Hundreds Sleep in Automobiles—Conditions Along the Route in a Quotidian State—French Report That They Have Advanced in Lorraine—English Victory Over German Cavalry at Compiègne.

(By International News Service.)
Paris, Sept. 3.—The Germans are crumpling the left wing of the allies and pushing them back to the Oise river valley. It is reported that the Germans finally fought their way through the Compiègne woods and across the first ridges of new earthworks, less than 40 miles from Paris. German light artillery are doing heavy damage. German spies in Paris are thought to be utilizing the wireless telephones, informing the enemy of military conditions here.

Photographing Fortifications.
Fresh troops are pouring into Paris. Martial law governs siege conditions. All but two gates are closed.

German aeroplanes fly over the outer fortifications, letting down a box-like apparatus, thought to be a photographic invention.

Germans Near Paris Forts.
London, Sept. 3.—The Germans are near the Paris fortifications, says a dispatch from Gournay, France.

Fleeing From Paris.
Tours, France, Sept. 3.—Paris refugees are swarming here. Tours is unable to take care of half of them, the overflow going to Bordeaux and other points. Innkeepers are charging $10 for cots. Hundreds slept in automobiles on the highway from Paris and Bordeaux. There is a continuous stream of mixed vehicles on the road and chaos exists everywhere.

Capital Moved to Bordeaux.
Paris, Sept. 3.—A proclamation was issued after midnight by the government announcing that the government of France had fled to Bordeaux.

GOLF GAME BETWEEN DUBOIS AND PUNKY.
The Clearfield-Curwensville Country club members were delighted to have the Dubois and Punkytowney golfers chose the links here as the neutral ground upon which to play off their tie.

The golfers arrived here at 9:00 o'clock this morning and played a practice game this morning. The final match game started at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

Turkey's Army Marching on to Invade Greece

(By International News Service.)
Rome, Sept. 3.—A report from Athens, but not confirmed, says a Turkish army is traversing Bulgaria's Aegean sea strip to invade Greece. If this is true the Turks' objective is evidently the newly acquired Greek territory between Kavala and Salonica, if not Salonica itself.
There is a likelihood of Turkey's sending three attacking armies, one across Bulgaria into Greece; the second against Russia in the Caucasus and the third against England in Egypt.

IMPORTANT DATES.

Stoneville reunion, Sept. 5.
O. U. A. M. picnic at the Mineral Spring park, Sept. 5.
Annual W. C. T. U. convention, at DuBois, Sept. 3 and 4.

Thursday, September 3.

Good evening! Be an optimist, even if you have to smile when you are approached by the tax collector.

The leaves are beginning to turn, but not after the manner in which they are turned about the first of the year.

The question of who began this war has been lost sight of in the more important problem of how the war is to be stopped.

Kaiser Wilhelm would feel somewhat puffed if the Russians were to capture Berlin while he is seeking to punish the French.

Eliminate the reckless autoist and the farmers will be more easily persuaded that the highways of the state should be improved.

It would be a nice thing if every household had a wireless station so that wife could send out a S. O. S. call for her hubby at night.

Clearfield citizens are no doubt trying to discover how they are going to get a report of the cost of the water works, which will be satisfactory to them.

The state fishery department is going to train young men how to manage fish hatcheries. What is wanted in this part of the state is fish which can be trained to live in polluted waters.

An idea of the difficulties encountered by the war correspondents to get news of the battles may be realized when it is known that even Richard Harding Davis cannot find out what is going on in Europe.

Congressmen are afflicted with nostalgia, a disease which in some places is known as home sickness. Being deprived of pay while they are absent from the halls of congress is enough to make many of the congressmen sick.

PARIS IS PREPARED.

If the Germans reach Paris they will find that city in much better shape to receive an enemy than it was in 1870-71. The fortifications in and around Paris are strong and are filled with the latest model guns and ammunition. It would be no easy task for the Germans to capture Paris, even with the big guns that country has at its command. The French are active at building forts, as those Germans who besieged Liege are well aware by this time. And the forts at Paris are much better prepared to withstand battering than were those at Liege.

It must also be understood that the Germans will probably find themselves between two fires when they reach Paris, if the plans of the French commanders are not changed. It is the purpose of the French to remain outside of Paris so that they may attack and harass the Germans while the latter are pounding away at the Paris fortifications. And, on top of this, it is probable that the vast Russian army will arrive on the scene in time to aid in the work of assaulting the Kaiser's troops. If the Germans are caught between two fires they may find themselves in a very tick-

ly situation and wish themselves nearer Berlin.

lish situation and wish themselves nearer Berlin.

BRUMBAUGH CANNOT ANSWER.

A. Nevin Detrich, state chairman of the Washington party, has asked Dr. Brumbaugh, Republican candidate for governor, to tell the people where he stands on the local option issue. Dr. Brumbaugh, before his nomination, expressed his approval of local option, but after he was placed on the ticket with Senator Penrose the doctor apparently decided that his advocacy of local option might embarrass the candidate of the liquor interests, and he has been as silent as a clam on that issue.

The fact that, after waiting months to let the people know what kind of a platform he and Brumbaugh would stand upon, Penrose refused to permit the Republican state committee to incorporate a local option plank in that platform, without a word or protest by Dr. Brumbaugh, proves quite conclusively that the doctor is willing to do what Penrose tells him to do and that he is even willing to be regarded as one of the candidates of the liquor interests rather than forgo the chances of election.

The people of Pennsylvania have been fooled into electing "well meaning" and "honest" candidates to the gubernatorial chair in years past, but they are not going to be fooled into supporting at the polls a candidate who so plainly shows that he is willing to stifle his conscience and agree to side-step one of the chief issues of the campaign at the behest of the enemies of local option. Dr. Brumbaugh's silence on the local option issue and his subservience to Penrose's dictation border very closely upon the hypocritical if not indicating political dishonesty.

CARRANZA MAKES TROUBLE.

General Carranza, provisional president of Mexico, has ordered the port of Vera Cruz closed. General Funston has asked the president to send him more troops that he may be able to cope with the situation in Mexico, where Carranza appears to be playing the tyrant with as much vigor as characterized the reign of General Huerta. Carranza is demanding double duties on importations, both native and American merchants being his victims.

There is little doubt that Carranza is just as vicious and villainous a man as Huerta was, and if the United States escapes a conflict with him it will be lucky. The truth of the matter is that Mexico has not developed a man who is capable and honest enough to be at the head of its government, and it may be necessary for the United States to go to the unpleasant extreme of assuming a protectorate over that country that peace may come to the Mexican people.

In Europe.

From peasant home to palace hall is felt the torturing dread Of news—the news that one beloved is captured, maimed or dead. With roar of cannon, din and hiss, Of bomb and shot and shell, God hears the shriek, the cry, the moan Of waiting ones; He hears as well The dumb endurance of a hurt Too deep for cry to tell. 'Twas He who won at Waterloo; He sent the rain that day To check Napoleon's arrogance And crush Ambition's sway. To check Napoleon's arrogance God's up there yet. He sees the course Of troops and ships. He rules The currents of the sea and air; His tactics beat the schools. Impotent Man! Puissant God! Strengthless, appalled we stand And while we thank Him for the peace Prevailing in our land Plead: "Check this war contagion, Lord. Baptise the world with peace, we pray! Send peace in Thine own way!" —Evaline Wright Nelson, East Liverpool, O.

ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT

G. A. R. AT DETROIT

The annual encampment of the G. A. R. held at Detroit, has attracted to that city a large number of veterans. The city authorities and the people of Detroit have been courteous to the veterans, showing them the time of their lives. Among other evidences of the hospitality of the Detroiters the following notice issued by the Typotheta-Franklin association of Detroit will show how the people of that city appreciated the coming of the old soldiers:

To the member addressed:
It was the sense of Monday's meeting that all members close their places of business Wednesday, September 2, all day, it being in honor of the big G. A. R. day.

"THE BANK OF SERVICE"

THE CASE OF JENNIE BRICE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"What was the last you saw of her?"
"She was going across the Sixth street bridge."
"Alone."
"No. She went with a young man we knew."
"There was a stir in the courtroom at this."
"Who was the young man?"
"Mr. Howell, a reporter on a newspaper here."
"Have you seen Mr. Howell since your arrest?"
"No, sir. He has been out of the city."

I was so excited by this time that I could hardly hear. I missed some of the cross examination. The district attorney pulled Mr. Ladley's testimony to pieces.

"You cut the boat's painter with your pocketknife?"

"I did."
"Then how do you account for Mrs. Pittman's broken knife, with the blade in your room?"

"I have no theory about it. She may have broken it herself. She had used it the day before to hit back one of a carpet."

"That was true, I had."
"That early Monday morning was cold, was it not?"

"Yes, yes."
"Why did your wife leave without her fur coat?"

"I did not know she had until we had left the house. Then I did not ask her. She would not speak to me."

"I see. But is it not true that, upon a wet fur coat, being shown you as your wife's, you said it could not be hers, as she had taken hers with her?"

"I do not recall such a statement."

"You recall a coat being shown you?"

"Yes. Mrs. Pittman brought a coat to my door, but I was working on a play I am writing, and I do not remember what I said. The coat was ruined. I did not want it. I probably said the first thing I thought of to get rid of the woman."

"I got up at that. I held my peace about the breadknife, but this was too much. However, the moment I started to speak somebody pushed me back into my chair and told me to be quiet."

"Now, you say you were in such a hurry to get this medicine for your wife that you cut the rope, thus cutting your wrist?"

"Yes. I have the scar still."

"You could not wait to untie the boat, and yet you went along the river front to see how high the water was?"

"Her alarm had excited me. But when I got out and remembered that the doctors had told us she would never die in an attack, I grew more composed."

"You got the medicine first, you say?"

"Yes."
"Mr. Alexander has testified that you got the medicine at 3:30. It has been shown that you left the house at 2 and got back about 4. Does not this show that with all your alarm you went to the river front first?"

"I was gone from 2 to 4," he replied calmly. "Mr. Alexander must be wrong about the time I awakened him. I got the medicine first."

"When your wife left you at the bridge, did she say where she was going?"

"No."
"You claim that this woman at Horner was your wife?"

"I think it likely."
"Was there an onyx clock in the second story room when you moved into it?"

"I do not recall the clock."
"Your wife did not take an onyx clock away with her?"

"Mr. Ladley smiled. "No."
The defense called Mr. Howell next. He looked rested and the happier for having seen Jennie, but he was still pale and showed the strain of some hidden anxiety. What that anxiety was the next two days were to tell us all.

"Mr. Howell," Mr. Lencelyn asked, "you know the prisoner?"

"Slightly."
"State when you met him."

"On Sunday morning, March 4. I went to see him."

"Will you tell us the nature of that visit?"

"My paper had heard he was writing a play for himself. I was to get an interview, with photographs, if possible."

"You saw his wife at that time?"

"Yes."
"When did you see her again?"

"The following morning at 6 o'clock or a little later. I walked across the Sixth street bridge with her and put her on a train for Horner, Pa."

"You are positive it was Jennie Brice?"

"Yes. I watched her get out of the boat while her husband steadied it."

"If you knew this, why did you not come to court sooner?"

"I have been out of the city."
"But you knew the prisoner had been arrested and that this testimony of yours would be invaluable to him."

"Yes. But I thought it necessary to produce Jennie Brice herself. My unreported word."

"You have been searching for Jennie Brice?"

"Yes. Since March 8."

"How was she dressed when you saw her last?"

"She wore a red and black hat and black coat. She carried a small gray valise."

"Thank you."
The cross examination did not shake his testimony. But it brought out some curious things. Mr. Howell refused to say how he happened to be at the end of the Sixth street bridge at that hour or why he had thought it necessary on meeting a woman he claimed to have known only twenty-four hours to go with her to the railway station and put her on a train.
The jury was visibly impressed and much shaken, for Mr. Howell carried conviction in every word he said. He looked the district attorney in the eye and once when our glances crossed he even smiled at me faintly. But I saw why he had tried to find Jennie Brice and had dreaded testifying. Not a woman in that courtroom and hardly a man but believed when he left the stand that he was or had been Jennie Brice's lover and as such was assisting her to leave her husband.

The Doctor Made a Careful Drawing

"Then you believe," the district attorney said at the end, "you believe, Mr. Howell, that Jennie Brice is living?"

"Jennie Brice was living on Monday morning, March 8," he said firmly.

"Miss Shaeffer has testified that on Wednesday this woman who you claim was Jennie Brice sent a letter to you from Horner. Is that the case?"

"Yes."
"The letter was signed 'Jennie Brice'?"

"It was signed 'J. B.'"

"Will you show the court that letter?"

"I destroyed it."

"It was a personal letter?"

"It merely said she had arrived safely and not to let any one know where she was."

"And yet you destroyed it?"

"A postscript said to do so."

"Why?"

"I do not know. An extra precaution probably."

"You were under the impression that she was going to stay there?"

"She was to have remained for a week."

"And you have been searching for this woman for two months?"

"He quailed, but his voice was steady. "Yes," he admitted.

"You were telling the truth, even if it was not all the truth. I believe had it gone to the jury then Mr. Ladley would have been acquitted. But late that afternoon things took a new turn. Counsel for the prosecution stated to the court that he had a new and important witness and got permission to introduce this further evidence. The witness was a Dr. Littlefield and proved to be my one night tenant of the second story front. Holcomb's prisoner of the night before took the stand. The doctor was less impressive in full daylight—he was a trifle shiny, a bit bulbous as to nose and indifferent as to finger nails. But his testimony was given with due professional weight.

"You are a doctor of medicine, Dr. Littlefield?" asked the district attorney.

"Yes."

"In active practice?"

"I have a cure for inebriates in Des Moines, Ia. I was formerly in general practice in New York city."

"You knew Jennie Ladley?"

"I had seen her at different theaters, and she consulted me professionally at one time in New York."

"You operated on her, I believe?"

"Yes. She came to me to have a name removed. It had been tattooed over her heart."

"You removed it?"

"Not at once. I tried fading the marks with goat's milk, but she was impatient. On the third visit to my office she demanded that the name be cut out."

"You did it?"

"Yes. She refused a general anesthetic and I used cocaine. The name was John—I believe a former husband. She intended to marry again."

A titter ran over the courtroom. People strained to the utmost are all ways glad of an excuse to smile. The laughter of a wrought on crowd always seems to me half hysterical.

"Have you seen photographs of the scar on the body found at Sewickley? Or the body itself?"

"No. I have not."

"Will you describe the operation?"

"I made a transverse incision for the body of the name and two vertical ones—one longer for the 'J' the other shorter for the stem of the 'B'. There was a dot after the name. I made a half inch incision for it."

"Will you sketch the scar as you recall it?"

The doctor made a careful drawing on a pad that was passed to him. The drawing was much like this:

Line for line, dot for dot, it was the scar on the body found at Sewickley.

"You are sure the woman was Jennie Brice?"

"She sent me tickets for the theater shortly after, and I had an announcement of her marriage to the prisoner some weeks later."

"Were there any witnesses to the operation?"

"My assistant. I can produce him at any time."

"That was not all of the trial, but it was the decisive moment. Shortly after the jury withdrew, and for twenty-four hours not a word was heard from them.

JONES WILL MAKE RAIDS ON ORGANIZED BASEBALL

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

(By International News Service)

New York, Sept. 3.—Felder Jones, has been signed up supposedly to devote his services exclusively to the management of the St. Louis Federalists. But the real job that confronts the old White Sox leader is said to be that of attempting to win the minor leagues from the embrace of organized baseball and getting them to join hands with the Feds.

Jones, proceeding about his mission probably will carry an olive branch in one hand and a bludgeon in the other. The minors who think it a wiser plan to spin the olive branch and to stick to Johnson, Herrman, et al, will then be made to feel the sting of the club.

Jones probably will point out to the minor leagues that if they come over to the Feds they will, of course, no longer be subject to Federal raids. The Feds will agree to buy young minor league stars at prices equal to that which they could get for them if they sold them to the American or National league.

"If you don't come with us well," said Jones, "will be the gist of the Jones ultimatum. 'If we raid well take your best players and you won't get a dollar for them because we'll deal direct with the players."

"Come with us and we'll guarantee you our fullest protection. And we'll keep our word, which is something more than the big powers in baseball have done. The National Agreement, of which every big and little organized league in the country is a part, provides that in times of trouble the big fellows must stand by you. Have they done this? Have they helped you? The Federals have raided you, taken your best players and caused you to suffer big losses, without the big fellows raising a hand in your defense."

Jones is to get a salary of $10,000 a year for three years and, in addition, a $50,000 block of the St. Louis Federal stock. Should he succeed in causing some of the minor leagues to jump to the Feds he will have more than earned his salary. The minor leagues act as the foundation that supports the American and National leagues. Without them the two big leagues could not exist.

The minors develop the young players and the big leagues grab them off when they are ripe and place them in their own ranks to take the place of their fading stars. If the American and National leagues could not get players from the minors, their leagues would die of decay, unless they undertook to develop the players themselves—a costly process.

Of course, if some of the minor leagues went over to the Feds, the American and National leagues could do just what the Feds have been doing—raid the leagues. But such a plan would be most disastrous to them. They get most of the minor leagues' new via the draft route, paying $15,000 for them and if they deal with the player direct, they would have to pay him a sum in excess of the $15,000 to outbid the Feds.

Much depends upon Jones' initial efforts along the lines of converting the minor leagues to the Federal faith. Should he succeed in getting one or two of the fairly big minors to jump it seems certain that Johnson and his crowd will be glad to make immediate peace overtures. They would then realize that the jumping of one league foreshadows the jumping of others, and the loss of the small leagues would cripple them beyond a cure.

PROBABLE ON RAILROADS

Passenger rates on railroads will increase within the next thirty or sixty days. Following the suggestion made by the recent decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the advanced rate case in which the commission set forth that passenger rates were not competitive, the carriers have got together and compiled new tariffs showing increases.

The new rates will apply to all eastern territory, and it is understood they will be at the rate generally of 3 cents a mile in ad of 2 cents, the standard new generally prevailing.

The tariffs have not yet been officially filed with the commission, but it is believed they will be filed within a few days.

but he ease with which he has manipulated two million French troops since the war began shows that he is a practical man, as well.

"Joffre the tactician," as he is known to the general staff, is scarcely known to Parisians. In times of peace he is retiring to a degree and shuns public recognition.

He entered the army in the war of 1870 when only 18 years old, and was promoted for gallantry on the field by Marshal MacMahon. Immediately after the war he was entrusted with rebuilding the forts around Paris, the forts that today are being prepared again to defend the capital against the Germans.

Made a captain at twenty-two, Joffre was sent into the east of France to build up the chain of fortresses there that have proved of such value in resisting the invaders from the north.

Afterward he spent many years raising impenetrable fortifications at Tonkin, Island of Formosa, and Madagascari. His next brilliant achievement was the crushing of the uprising in Dahomey. There with a small force, he utterly crushed the natives and after a short campaign marched into Timbuctoo. Since that time Joffre has been at the head of the French war college; where officers are trained. In addition he has been supreme organizer of the French army and when war loomed on the horizon, there was no debate about placing Joffre in the field as generalissimo. Nobody else was thought of. He is the Lord Kitchen of France.

his station. There were a group of reservists on the platform. All were talking volubly of going to war.

"When do you join?" one youth asked Joffre.

"I have already joined," was the quiet answer.

"Where do you come from?" was asked.

"Paris," was the laconic answer.

"What's your name?" persisted the rural reservist.

"It is best for soldiers to have no names," the generalissimo said with one of his rare smiles, and when an officer who recognized him would have reproved the reservist, Joffre forbade him.

To strike rather than to be struck is one of his axioms. He believes in a forward policy, a policy of attack.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Red Widow."

One of the brightest musical comedy successes of the past and present season, "The Red Widow," direct from its engagement at the Aslor theatre, New York, will be the attraction at the New opera house tonight.

"The Red Widow," while clad in her lurid raiment will offer opportunities to the feminine portion of the theatregoers for viewing some of the most exquisite creations of the dressmakers' art. Gown building that has been brought up to this very day by the purveyors of fashion will supply this attraction with each new model as soon as evolved. Of course the ladies all love to see beautiful apparel and some may desire to copy the up-to-the-minute styles, and a word to the management will permit the inspection of the coveted attire. In addition to pleasing the ladies usually they and their escorts will be charmed by the delectable song numbers, have their risibilities tickled by the comedy situations and no doubt will relish the keen thrusts of satire and the exquisite flashes of wit with which the book is said to abound. A company of nearly three score players will interpret both the beauties of the lyrics and dance numbers.

Al Wilson Coming.

Edward Everett completed arrangements today for the appearance of Al H. Wilson, the German dialect comedian, at the opera house on Friday, Sept. 11. Mr. Everett is an ex-printer who knows the value of newspaper advertising. "I find newspapers the best medium for theatrical publicity," said Mr. Everett during a conversation today. "I have tried various ways of advertising to bring the merits of different theatrical attractions with which I have been connected before the public, but in the end I always went back to the newspapers. I find that by paying careful attention to the construction of the advertisement and by making it attractive, that people will read it. A great deal depends on the advertisement. I believe that by advertising in newspapers a man receives five times as much for the money expended as in any other way. In these days, no business can be made a success unless it is given the right sort of publicity—specially, aggressively, truthfully and persistently. For the theatrical manager or merchant who foolishly claims that he doesn't need to advertise, there is but one ending. The former soon closes his season, and it is not long before the latter has dust on his counters and cob-webs on his shelves."

The Russian officer enters the military academy very young, seven years or there about, and remains in training ten or eleven years before he is given a commission.

The difficulties confronting the Russian general staff in the present war are many and great. While the British army knows something of the guarding of frontiers by its experience in India, and the Germans and French have had their Alsace-Lorraine frontiers to look after, huge

Russian has seven frontier to be protected. The great empire is vulnerable from seven angles, by land and sea, and while sending her hordes of invaders into Austria and Prussia, must always keep a big force at home to look after her thousands of miles of borders.

It is an axiom of war to be prepared to out-number an enemy at a given point, but Russia has to be ready to out-number her enemy at many points, hundreds and sometimes thousands of miles from each other. Another grave obstacle in the way of the Russian general staff now are the traditions of bribery and corruption which still remain in certain circles of the Russian bureaucracy.

PENROSE HELPED THE BIG TRUSTS

Supported Vicious Bill Aimed at Interests of American Farmers

ADVOCATED RECIPROCITY BILL

Measure Was Intended to Permit Importation of Canadian Farm Products in Competition With Those of the Home Agriculturist—Penrose Worked and Voted for This Bill, Which Was Passed During the Taft Administration.

(SPECIAL TO THE PROGRESS) Washington, D. C., Sept. 4.—Senator Penrose's attempt to secure the apostle of protection in his reelection in Pennsylvania is shown by his party state platform, created a lot of amusement among congressmen who remembered how he was the free trade champion for farm products back in 1911.

It was pointed out here that in the fight to pass the Canadian reciprocity bill and put all farm products on the free list, while at the same time keeping trust products protected, Senator Penrose was as conspicuous by his work on the floor, as he has been in this session by his absence.

It put on the free list, wheat, corn, barley, hay and grains of all kinds. It kept on a high tariff list, flour, meals, breakfast foods, and cereals, which are marketed by the trusts.

It allowed the big combinations which carry farm products to force the farmer to sell at the low prices asked for Canadian products under the free trade, while it kept the tariff up on the farm goods which are manufactured by the trusts.

Penrose was the floor leader in the attempt to fasten this disreputable and rotten legislation on the farmers. On July the 2nd, 1911, he voted for the Canadian reciprocity bill, as is shown by the Congressional Record.

Fortunately the farmers of Canada rejected this bill and thus saved the American farmer. Congressmen who remember how Penrose worked for free trade on farm products in this bill and how he is now shouting for protection say that if he can pull through he will prove himself the greatest bunco-steerer that ever fooled the people.

Work of the County Organization Bearing Satisfactory Results—Discussions Full of Interesting Points—Gold Medal Contest and Music and Songs Enliven the Meeting.

Local unions were well represented in the twenty-ninth annual convention of the Clearfield county Women's Christian Temperance union at the opening sessions at DuBois Thursday morning. President Mrs. S. Canfield Wilson, of Curwensville, opened the meeting and Mrs. L. M. Newell conducted devotional services.

Discussions relative to the publishing of the License Annual and the best method of securing names to remonstrances against liquor licenses resulted in the corresponding secretary being directed to notify each union to appoint a committee to secure names for the License Annual.

Mrs. Frank, wife of Rev. Mr. Frank, of Mahaffey, conducted devotional services at the opening of the afternoon session. Miss Colt, personal worker of the Stough evangelic campaign, spoke on the temperance work done by the evangelists.

Mrs. Canfield Wilson, county president, made a very encouraging report, in which she stated that the general sentiment in state and in nation is in favor of prohibition. She said there are seven dry counties in Pennsylvania and seven dry states in the union.

A number of interesting reports were read, and Mrs. Cora Miller talked on the work of the young people for the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Bloomsdale of the "Work in the Field" stated that much good result had been accomplished.

Austro-Hungarian Forces Shattered, in Addition to Terrific Losses They Have Sustained in Dead and Wounded

100,000 PRISONERS HAVE BEEN TAKEN

Several Bodies of Austrians Have Been Found After Being Surrounded—Two Million Russians Operating Along the 250 Miles of Front Extending From Zamost, in Russian Poland, to Suczawa, in Galicia—Opponents Driven Back With Heavy Losses All Along the Line—Two Important Cities Taken by the Czar's Troops.

(By International News Service) St. Petersburg, Sept. 4.—It was officially stated today.

"Our victories over the Austrians were greater than early reports indicated. Apparently the enemies' forces are shattered, in addition to their terrific losses in killed and wounded. Several bodies of the enemy cut off in retreat and surrounded were forced to surrender. One report from the front indicates that 100,000 prisoners were taken."

Two million Russians are operating 250 miles along a front extending from Zamost, Russian Poland to the vicinity of Suczawa, in the Austrian province of Bukovina.

They have driven back the Austro-Hungarian armies with heavy losses, according to an official statement issued by the general staff today. It is stated that Czernowitz, (Dukovyna) and Zolwiew, in Galicia, have both been captured.

Austrians Retreat in Disorder. Petrograd, (St. Petersburg,) Sept. 4.—Routed by the Russians at Lemberg, Galicia, with a loss of more than 100,000 men and scores of guns, according to official reports, the Austrian army yesterday fell back in disorder.

Nearly a million and half men were engaged in this greatest battle of the present war. Of this number Russia had more than 800,000, and Austria's total exceeded 600,000.

Austrian Corps Annihilated. As a result of the last eight days of fighting, five of the crack Austrian army corps, the Third, Seventh, Eleventh, Twelfth and Fourteenth, have been virtually annihilated.

Their reserve supplies of ammunition, 150 guns of all calibers, food equipment and field supplies of all descriptions have been captured. Thousands of prisoners, including many officers of high rank, have been captured.

Germans Attempt Sortie. The German garrison of Koenigsberg attempted a sortie in force against the Russian forces which have isolated the citadel. They were driven back with heavy losses. The official reports issued today describe the situation everywhere as "satisfactory."

The Russian army at the front is being constantly reinforced from the active army mobilized at the interior centers, and the two corps which were in the fighting in east Prussia last week have been replaced with fresh troops.

GERMANY'S VAST AEROPLANE FLEET

Zeppelins Are Dangerous Machines in Hands of an Enemy

Major Lansing Snyder, Jr., has returned by airship from a visit to Yellowstone park.

United States Senator Hagerty has introduced a bill in the senate providing for the widening and deepening of the West Branch river to a depth which would permit vessels drawing thirty feet of water to pass upward as far as Chest creek.

The new fifteen-story building of the Clearfield Progress will be occupied by that paper next week.

A resolution was introduced in council last night providing for the municipal ownership of the water works.

A wireless from Washington states that congress is still debating the bill for the regulation of trusts.

Two suffragists were arrested yesterday for illegal voting at the May primaries.

Repairs are being made to the incinerating plant at the mouth of Clearfield creek.

A slight fire occurred at the central market house last night, the auto-chemical quenching the flame before much damage was done.

Fifty-two trains arrived and departed from the union station yesterday.

On Friendship, I would be true, for there are those who trust me.

I would be pure, for there are those who care.

I would be strong, for there is much to suffer.

I would be brave, for there is much to dare.

I would be friends of all—the foe—the friendless.

I would be giving, and forget the gift; I would be humble, for I know my weakness.

I would look up—and laugh and love and lift.

With all truths frankness I would be so tender.

Since highest hopes are the end of scorn That heeds not to help me sense the fragrance.

Before they feel the thorn.

With all love's tenderness I would be so loyal.

Since purest passion is the end of fear That friends betray me when I'm dips that love them.

Hard truths they have to hear.

GERMANY'S VAST AEROPLANE FLEET

Zeppelins Are Dangerous Machines in Hands of an Enemy

Kaiser Has Many Air Ships

Thirteen Hundred Aeroplanes in Connection With the Zeppelin, Dirigibles Give France Something to Worry Over—Germany Has More of These Than All of her Opponents Combined.

(By International News Service)

The story of the ramming of a German Zeppelin airship by the famous French aviator Roland Garros, a story which yet lacks for confirmation and is disbelieved by those who know Garros best, probably arose from the idea that a Zeppelin cannot be attacked in any other way, owing to its being defended from assault from above, by a rapid-firing gun mounted atop the gas bag.

In order to make sure of his aim at a bomb thrower in an aeroplane would have to approach within 100 feet above the Zeppelin where he would be within easy range of the gun supposed to be mounted on the balloon.

As a matter of fact however, only three or four of the very latest Zeppelins are equipped with these gun platforms and furthermore, it is learned on good authority that none of them is mounted with guns, for it is now known that if there were a leak in any of the chambers of the gas bag near the middle portion of the dirigible, the escaping hydrogen would find its way out near the gun platform and would be most certain to explode when the gun was discharged.

It is now believed that the explosion several months ago of the new Zeppelin at Johannisthal, near Berlin, when the entire crew were killed, was caused by the gun on firing blank cartridges as an experiment.

It is therefore comparatively a simple matter, in the absence of a gun, for an aviator to approach quite close to a Zeppelin from above, for the crew in the cars below the gas bag, cannot hit the aeroplane, so long as the pilot keeps the envelope between himself and the cars of the Zeppelin.

While Germany has been the especial sponsor of the dirigible for military purposes, that country has not overlooked the aeroplane. While France has popularly been supposed to lead in war aeroplanes, Germany has as many as thirteen hundred of these machines, and perhaps the largest trained corps of military aviators in the world.

These thirteen hundred machines are all comparatively new and with all the latest improvements. With one motor firm putting out 140 engines a month for the last six months, one may safely put the entire German output at 250 a month.

With an aeroplane for each of these engines, German military aviation activity breaks all records.

The number of pilots to fly these machines is greater than the aviation corps of any other nation because of Germany's policy of encouraging civilian flying schools. Under this system, each aeroplane firm of any importance had a certain number of soldiers, mostly officers, but some privates and non-commissioned officers allotted to its school to be trained by the firm's own pilots.

The training of these military flyers was paid at a rate that enabled the companies to use the best machines and pay high wages to their pilots. The firms could afford to provide comfortable quarters for their pupils and in other ways to do things on a scale which does not exist in any other country.

In order to stimulate progress in aviation, military aviators were encouraged to enter the big flying competitions and various government departments gave handsome prizes. For this reason, there were thirty starters in the Prince-Henry competition this year, while the big London-Manchester air race in England about the same time brought out only six starters.

It is now practically certain that the German and Austrian air scouts together outnumber all the French, Russian, British, Belgian, Serbian and Dutch aviators, so that in the aerial end of the war, Germany is far ahead of her enemies.

MOVIES

"ON THE HIGH SEAS" AND "UNIVERSAL IKE"

"On the High Seas" shown at the opera house this evening.

The captain of the schooner was a drunkard. His first mate was a bully and also a heavy drinker. There was hardly a man on the old wooden vessel who, if the occasion proved, wouldn't plunge his knife into the other fellow's back. Into this junk ship, among the crowd of brutal, unprincipled men, Mr. Marshall, rich shipowner, sent his son to reform him—to make a man of him, as he put it. Do you think the old father was wise in his action? If we are to believe the saying that "man is fashioned after his environment," the father, by sending his boy into such a mess, was taking the right course to make a devil of him.

But on that point you are going to get a healthy surprise—a jolt. Jim, the son, was, as some go, worthless, and the fact that he was raised in ease and pampered, was purely to blame for that. When he found himself lashed by tarred-oiled the filthy old ship and drifted on the high seas, it was an awful shock to his aristocratic sensibilities. But there he was, and then every fiber of his better nature rebelled against absorbing, or even galling the sort of life conditions seemed to superinduce. However, he might have failed, because like the rest, except that there was just one clear thing on the ship—a girl. She was the daughter of the captain.

Around this girl, around this boy, Jim swings a story, chuck full of adventure, action, romance and even tragedy. In order to secure the proper atmosphere characteristic and picturesque settings and the tang of the salt air a genuine shipowner, antique, but still, seaworthy, was secured by the Imp company through J. R. Seibert.

"Universal Ike" on his "Honey Moon" is an interesting and amusing adventure which will be shown at the opera house this evening. Troubles follow Ike in this adventure as in all others, and unaccountably to the ways of the city he and his wife are jailed on their trip and have trouble in proving to the judge that they have not trespassed upon the law.

"The Way of a Woman" is another comedy which will be worth seeing at the opera house this evening.

PARIS MAY SURRENDER TO GERMANY

Line of the railroad to Boulogne, and about fifty miles to the west of La Fere and other points in the department of Aisne.

Fresh Fighting in Belgium.

A significant dispatch is that received by the Central News from Amsterdam, saying that fresh fighting is taking place near Malines, Belgium.

Coupled with this is the announcement from Harwich that the boat service between that British port and Antwerp was resumed tonight, after having been discontinued for a fortnight.

It is reported here that another large expeditionary force, probably 100,000 men, was sent from Harwich to Antwerp. It is possible that this force formed a junction with the Belgians and that the two aim to sever the German army's communications and threaten the right flank of the Kaiser's forces in France.

Concerning the fall of Amiens, the Mail's correspondent writes:

"It was a black Sunday evening when a party of Germans entered Amiens by the Rue Jules Ferry. After a brief reconnaissance they retired to the German main body at Compiègne. A half hour later, they returned, accompanied by an officer bearing a white flag. The officer interviewed Mayor Fournier at the town hall. After a brief discussion the mayor appeared in front of the town hall with a flag and officially announced the surrender of the city. He urged that the citizens make no disturbance. The mayor and the municipal authorities were taken out in carriages to pay a royal visit to the German commander who told them that they would be held personally responsible for their lives for the good conduct of the citizens."

Entrenchments Outside of Paris. Paris, Sept. 3.—An immense and well-planned system of entrenchments is being constructed outside the city. It is reported that the engineers in charge of the work are keeping several hundred thousand men busy. The capital is now in a state of siege. Martial law is in vogue.

It is officially announced that General Gallieni, commander of the army defending the north, yesterday issued the following proclamation to the inhabitants of Paris:

"The members of the government of the republic have left Paris in order to give a new impetus to the defense of the nation. I have been ordered to defend Paris against the invaders. This order I will fulfill to the end."

GALLIENI, Military Governor of Paris, commanding the army of Paris.

CONSTABLE CAPTURES DESPERATE DESPERADOS

Early this forenoon, six fierce, desperate men entered the yard of William Robbins, who lives at the Moose creek bridge and demanded that coffee be made for their morning meal. Whereupon Mr. Robbins became very uneasy and called for officers of the law. The officers responded and after capturing the desperados, brought them to Magistrate Barclay's office, who commended the officers for their efficient work and discharged them. Upon investigation, the six proved to be young fellows from Philadelphia, who were on their way to Cleveland, via the A No. 1 route, box cars, gondolas, etc.

BRIEF SKETCH OF CHIESA, THE NEWLY ELECTED POPE

Washington, Sept. 3.—Cardinal Del Val Chiesa, the new pope, was born at Pedil, near Genoa, in Italy in 1854. He was ordained to the priesthood in '78 and went to Madrid as secretary of the Nuncio in 1883, remaining there until 1887. He returned to Rome and acted as a minor official in the office of the papal secretary of state. In 1901 the late Cardinal Rampollo, then the secretary of state, recognized his ability and promoted him to the substitute, or virtually first assistant secretary of state. Pope Pius X, in 1907, appointed him Archbishop of Bologna, Italy. There he remained as archbishop until he was created cardinal at the last consistory held early this year.

Cardinal Della Chiesa is regarded here as being a man very similar to Cardinal Rampollo. It was to Cardinal Rampollo that he owed the promotion to the office of vice secretary of state which brought him to the attention of Pope Pius and probably enabled him to get the red hat only seven years after he had been made archbishop.

TWO BAKERS IN TROUBLE OVER SOME FLOUR SACKS

Two cases came up this week arising out of the trouble caused by some flour sacks, two bakers each claiming ownership. The first case was brought before Squire Barclay early in the week, commonwealth vs. Francis C. Dilli, Frank Spingola charging Dilli with assault and battery.

Yesterday the case of the commonwealth vs. Frank Spingola was heard by Squire Barclay, the charge being assault and battery. In both cases bail was given and the defendants held for court.

AMUSEMENTS

The opera house was packed last evening from pit to dome to witness the first play of the season, "The Red Widow," and the audience was not disappointed for the play was an incentive to laughter from beginning to end. Cicero Hannibal Butts, a retired millionaire corset manufacturer of Yonkers, N. Y., U. S. A., is also a colonel in the National Guards with to let him tell it, an international reputation as an army tactician. In London, when he arrives on a tour around the world, he meets Anna Varvara, "The Red Widow." Anna is fascinating and flirt, also she is the star of a band of bloodthirsty nihilists who are seeking the life of the czar, a fact which Cicero does not discover until he has had some exciting experiences.

Time and time again the audience applauded the splendid acting of the Red Widow, the rollickery Hannibal Butts, the gay dancing of Yvette and Oswald, the martial acting of Basil Romanoff, of the Imperial Guards, and the leader of the nihilists with his inevitable bomb.

The play was full of interesting plots, spirited and entertaining and spiced with wit. The scenery was beautiful and oriental in its setting. The choruses were delightful in dancing and singing.
